FOREWORD

It was indeed a pleasant surprise when I learnt that the first volume of a Handlist of the Ecclesiastical Archives of the Malta Cathedral Museum, Mdina, was ready for publication. Little did I think, when I helped launch this phase of the microfilm project in Malta in July, 1973, that the work would develop and progress so rapidly as to make it possible for the first part of a Handlist to be offered for use and guidance to the public so soon. And, just as the microfilming procedure in Malta is well organized, so is the tabulating and description of the material which is being photographed herewith presented in precise and well ordered fashion.

Malta may indeed be a small land, but it is a land rich in history and culture. The strategically located Mediterranean island known as Malta actually consists of three islands: a larger one called Malta, and two smaller ones, Gozo and Comino. Total size is 122 square miles, with a population of 330,000 hardy but kindly people, almost totally Christian.

This island land has stood at the center of western civilization since before the creation of the Roman Empire. Phoenician, Carthaginian, and Roman influences are discernible in Malta's earliest history, and Christianity reached the islands through the great missionary apostle, St. Paul, who was shipwrecked there on a voyage to Rome, and during his three months stay there established the Christian faith on the islands, which has survived the ordeals of a succession of inroads untarnished down to our day. In the Middle Ages Byzantine, Arabic and Norman influences successively dominated, until, in the sixteenth century, the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, forced by the Turks to leave Rhodes, were given Malta as a new haven by Emperor Charles V of Spain, as Malta at the time belonged to the Spanish dominions. It was under the leadership of the valiant Knights of Malta that in 1565 Malta withstood the great Turkish siege of the island, thereby checking effectively the expansion of Mohammedan power in the western Mediterranean. The Knights of Malta ruled the island till 1798, when a brief French reign of four years followed, superseded by a longer British reign of 160 years. Malta achieved final independence in 1964 and became a republic in 1974.

Malta's central position in the history of the medieval period, and the various cultural influences absorbed by her inhabitants during the Middle Ages insure that the manuscripts which have survived there from medieval times are of special historical and literary interest. The manuscript collections of Malta offer to students and scholars a unique opportunity to study the primary documents of an important cultural center of medieval Europe, a center which exhibits the influences not only of various western cultures and nationalities but of those of the east as well. The Maltese manuscripts can show the force of cultural shifts in a way few other sources of medieval Europe do.

It was in view of the significance of this body of material that Mr. J. S. Micallef, J.D., Honorary Consul of Malta for the St. Paul-Minneapolis area, suggested, in October, 1970, the creation of a Malta Study Center at Collegeville. Negotiations for the microfilming of Maltese manuscripts, conducted by Dr. Julian G. Plante, Director of the Monastic Manuscript Microfilm Library at St. John's University, Collegeville, Minnesota, included visits to Malta in 1972 and early 1973. Through the kind permission of His Grace, the Most Reverend Michael Gonzi, Archbishop of Malta, and the Metropolitan Chapter, actual microfilming operations were able to begin in July, 1973, at the Cathedral Museum in Mdina under the direction of Reverend John Azzopardi, Curator of the Museum, while I myself, who had directed the microfilming operations in Europe for seven years (1964-1971), assisted in setting up the project in Malta.

Thus, there is now being collected on the campus of St. John's University an impressive collection of microfilms as an integral part of the Monastic Manuscript Microfilm Library, known under the special name of The Malta Study Center. It is comprised both of microfilm copies of medieval manuscripts and archival documents from Maltese libraries and a wide range of published works on Malta's history, literature and culture. The Center both guards against the loss or deterioration of the primary sources it possesses on film and provides an opportunity for thorough and exact research on them.

INTRODUCTION

The Archives of the Curia Episcopalis Melitensis housed in the Cathedral Museum at Notabile, Malta¹ -- herein referred to as the CEM Archives -- contain substantially all the documents transported in October 1933² from the Archbishop's Palace at Notabile to the Old Seminary, now the Cathedral Museum, and forming the old Archivio dell'Episcopio, also called Archivio del Provicariato della Città Notabile. These Archives also contain a certain amount of loose material transported from the Valletta Curia. In the present arrangement of the CEM Archives, this additional material is restricted to the Acta Originalia

The Cathedral and Inquisitorial Archives were formerly accessible to a limited number of scholars. Since 1969, when the Cathedral Museum was inaugurated, all these fonds are easily accessible to research workers.

A handlist of a good part of the AIM archives was published as an appendix by Prof. A. Vella, The Tribunal of the Inquisition in Malta, "Royal University of Malta Historical Studies," I (Valletta: Royal University of Malta, 1964, 1st ed.; 1973, 2nd ed. updated by Fr. John Azzopardi, Curator of the Cathedral Museum).

This handlist of the CEM Archives will be followed by a handlist of the ACM Archives.

and to volumes 47 - 61 of the Registrum Cedularum Depositorum. 3

One must keep in mind that the Ecclesiastical Archives of the diocese of Malta -- the Episcopal and the Inquisitorial Archives -- have been transferred from one building to another several times. Political reasons -- especially in the period of the French occupation -- and other administrative reasons are responsible for these transportations. As the greater part of these documents consisted of loose sheets and fascicles, a certain amount of confusion in the documents has inevitably taken place. 5

The French Government in Malta had suppressed the Episcopal and the Inquisitorial Tribunals, and on the 26th of July 1798 instituted the Dépôt Général of the suppressed Tribunals. The Bishop reluctantly handed over to the French the Ecclesiastical Archives but succeeded in getting them back from Sir Alexander Ball in 1802. Not only did hundreds of documents of the Bishop get mixed up with those of the Inquisitor but also

^{2.} ACM, Acta Capitularia, October 1933.

^{3.} This additional material belongs to the Valletta Curia. It was practically impossible to separate the Acta of the Valletta Curia from those of Notabile. The 15 volumes of Cedulae (R.C.D. 47 to 61) have for many years formed part of the collection of the Cedulae of the Notabile Curia.

^{4.} On the vicissitudes of the Maltese Archives in this interesting period of Maltese History see G. Gatt, "Gli Archivi di Malta durante l'occupazione francese" Archivio Storico di Malta, IX (1938), 411-428; A. Mifsud, "Appunti sugli Archivi di Malta," Archivum Melitense, II, 9-67; H. Scicluna, "Documents relating to the French Occupation of Malta," Archivum Melitense V, 1-303.

⁵ Of the 947 volumes now forming the CEM Archives, over 700 were, up to 1970, a vast heap of unsorted material.

whole sections of bound volumes were handed over to different entities.

The Inquisitor's Archives and a good number of Episcopal documents were later transferred by the present Archbishop first from the Valletta Curia to the Notabile Palace, and then to the Old Seminary, now the Cathedral Museum. In 1970 another section of these loose documents -- containing Episcopal and Inquisitorial material -- was transported from the Valletta Curia to the Cathedral Museum. 7

From the 15th to 17th centuries the Curia et Notabile⁸ was

6. G. Gatt, Op.cit., p. 9, notes that whereas the Inquisitor's Archives contain several volumes of Spogli (belonging to the Order), the Archives of the Superior Courts contain several volumes of the Inquisition and the Bishop's Curias.

Bulletin No. 2 of the Institute of Historical Research, p. 5, cites 14 volumes (1587-1824) of the Curia Provicarialis Civitatis Notabilis, 3 volumes of the Officium Civile Sanctae Inquisitionis and 1 volume of the Tribunal Fabricae S. Petri.

7. The material transported in 1970 by the compiler of this handlist -- with the approval of His Grace the Archbishop -- consisted of 70 cartons of loose documents. The files of the Acta Originalia were added to the other Acta which already contained hundreds belonging to the Valletta Curia. The other papers have been kept separate and are not included in this handlist.

The documents transported are just a tiny part of a bigger collection containing important materials of the Bishop's Curias and of the Civil Proceedings and the Tribunal of the Fabrica S. Petri of the Inquisition. These documents are located in the office of the Pastoral Research Services.

8. The Bishop had more than one Curia. The Valletta Curia was called the Magna Curia. The Curia of Notabile, Malta and Victoria, Gozo were called Provicariales. When the Bishop transferred his Palace to Vittoriosa, he formed there his Curia. One volume of MSS transported from Valletta to Notabile contains decrees published in nova civitate (referring to Vittoriosa).

presided over by the Bishop himself or his Vicars, and hence called Curia Episcopalis Civitatis Notabilis. In the late 17th or early 18th century it was presided over by the Provicarius Civitatis Notabilis and called Curia Episcopalis et Provicariales Civitatis Notabilis or simply Curia Provicarialis.

The office of Provicarius Civitatis Notabilis dates from 1591 when Don Salvo Scerri served as its first occupant;9 the office has been retained down to 1926, the last occupant being Mgr Matteo Cortis. The jurisdiction of the Provicar extended over Notabile -- Rabat and the nearby villages of Dingli and Siggiewi. But the Corte Provicariale presided over by the Provicar with a fully organized tribunal is not mentioned in the titles of the registers before 1700. It was formally suppressed on 10 April 1828.

The volumes of the CEM Archives are divided into three sections: Original documents, Registers and Repertories.

The Acta Originalia, dating from about 1400 to 1830, is by far the most important section of these Archives. The series contains 464 volumes, 21,259 documents, with 183,680 folios. Until 1970 these documents formed an unsorted collection of loose sheets and fascicles, folded in the middle, with an indication of the name and subject, title and date or indictional number written at the back. They have now been arranged in volumes in chronological order. Their contents are very extensive. A list of 67 Latin titles given by the Curia officials is here inserted to give an indication of the vastness of field and social importance covered by these documents. The list, compiled from the documents themselves or from their entries in the registers, is arranged in alphabetical order:

Apocha, Bannum, Beneficium, Carceratio, Cedula declaratoria, Cedula depositi, Cedula laudatoria, Cessatio, Ces-

The Conti Originali comprise a series of 213 volumes giving full and detailed accounts of the administration of the various churches and confraternities falling under the Provicar's jurisdiction. They are the old counter part of the Ufficio della Revisione of the Archiepiscopal Curia. They shed important light on the artistic, religious, economic and social history of Malta.

The Bastardella or Protocollo Actorum Originalium contain the first notes jotted down by the Curia officials and later worked out in the full documents of the Acta Originalia.

The $\underline{\text{Mandati}}$ are decrees issued by the Bishop of his Vicars at the request of the respective procurators, authorising payments.

The Citationes are instructiones given to the alarius to cite in the Episcopal or Provicarial Court, a particular person.

The Registers contain full transcripts, important excerpts or brief summaries of the original documents preserved in the Acta. They throw light on the original structure of the Archives and of the Curia itself. They break down the Acta Originalia into Acta Civilia, Acta Criminalia, Supplicationes, Donationes, Monitorii, Cedulae and Sententiae.

This section also includes 18 vols. (9 of which have been recently brought from the Valletta Curia, to complete the series) entitled Registrum Ordinandorum et Privilegiorum Clericalium. They include lists of ordained candidates (reg. ordinandorum) with details of date and place of ordination and name of ordaining bishop -- in several cases a foreign bishop, especially when the See was vacant -- documents relative to ordinations (privilegia); papal dispensations (breve apostolicum dispensationis) and permissions to candidates by their bishops to receive orders from another bishop (litterae dimissoriales).

The importance of the 22 slender volumes of repertories for research work is self-evident.ll

Apart from their being new to the interested public -- this is the first handlist ever published of these Archives -- these MSS, the greater part of which are in an excellent state of preservation, contain a certain amount of Medieval material (at least ten pre-1530 volumes of Acta Originalia), abound with references to the island of Gozo, and throw important light on the Ecclesiastical, artistic, social and economic history of Malta, in itself an important center of Mediterranean culture.12

More repertories are occasionally bound up in the volumes themselves.
